

The Federal Communications Commission
445 12th Street, SW
Washington, DC 20554

Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

You probably get hundreds of letters that are the same, saying the exact same thing. You are not hearing each individual's story. Each person has a reason that they don't want to pay these taxes or "flat fees" as they call them. I think that people will not want to pay higher prices for their cell phones and will therefore not get phones and plans. I think that it would be better to just let everyone pay what they are paying now. This is my personal story:

I am a middle school student who got a prepaid cell phone for Christmas. I have to pay for my own minutes, which by the way are quite costly. I only use it in emergencies, like if I desperately need a ride home or something like that. I know that if the prices go up, I will be unable to pay and will have to get rid of my phone. I get all of my money from babysitting, and so there is not much to use. I really wish that you would not raise any prices. Could you please email me back at: squaunkie@yahoo.com Thank you for your concern.

cc: Marlene Dortch, Secretary

Sincerely,

Audrey G.
Woodhaven Drive
Palm Coast, Florida 32164